

TRICOLOR IN EVIDENCE TODAY

Magnificent Cruiser of France Arrives in Time for the National Fete.

ADMIRAL CASTRIES IS HERE

Fall of the Bastille Will Be Well Remembered in Honolulu This Year.

(From Thursday's Advertiser.)
Wreathed in gun-smoke, ponderous in appearance, and looking as if she were designed on the lines of a giant champagne bottle, the magnificent French armored cruiser Montcalm arrived yesterday afternoon, flying Admiral Castries' flag, from the China station and is moored at the naval wharf. With the tricolor fluttering above clouds of powder smoke as her small guns belched forth a salute to the admiral of the port, the Montcalm looked the powerful naval machine the French government wished her to be. With guns thundering ashore and guns booming aboard, with a double rank of marines presenting arms on the naval wharf, with two American cruisers lying near by, their decks lined with bluejackets, the harbor bore an unusually stirring martial aspect.

But the Montcalm did not reach her moorings easily. As she entered the main harbor basin opposite the naval slip she appeared to maneuver awkwardly and this was apparent when her keel-edge bow almost shaved off the dolphin marking the outer end of the marine railway. Then she swung far back into the stream and a steel spring parted. Then her port anchor was dropped and for the next two hours pilot and officers worked assiduously to bring the giant ship to the wharf. The Montcalm has three screws and these appear to work in reverse order, so that when the pilot called for an astern port, she went contrary to the general direction. The pilot's lack of knowledge of French and the officers' lack of fluency in English caused some complications, besides, and it was almost six o'clock when the big fighter was safely tied to the wharf.

While the vessel was coming into the harbor the French consul, Doctor Marques, was taken out in the cruiser's launch and placed aboard where he was greeted by the captain and in turn presented to Admiral Castries. After the cruiser was moored the consul took his departure and was accorded the usual consul's gun salute.

Official Calls Today.
Owing to the lateness of arrival yesterday, the French admiral's call upon Rear-Admiral Rees, U. S. N., commandant of the naval station, was postponed and that formal proceeding will take place this morning, the admiral, accompanied also by his chief of staff and the captain, also calling upon Acting Governor Mott-Smith. Both calls may be made between ten and eleven o'clock. Both calls will be returned promptly.

It has also been planned by Acting Governor Mott-Smith to take the admiral on an auto tour of the Island today.

Here Eight Days.

The Montcalm will remain in port until July 21, when she will sail for Seattle, San Francisco, Salina Cruz, Acapulco, Callao, Iquique, Valparaiso, thence across the Pacific to Papeete, Tahiti, to Australia, to New Caledonia, thence on to Japan, and eventually she will berth again in China waters.

The cruise is the first undertaken by so large a French warship as the Montcalm, and the cruise is largely to show the tricolor in all Pacific ports and the islands where France is supreme. Other and smaller cruisers have been here, including the jaunty little Protet. The Pacific island squadron and the far East squadron have been united in one general fleet, with the Montcalm as the flagship, and it is now her duty to display the flag throughout the Pacific.

The Montcalm carries thirty officers and a crew of about six hundred and fifty men.

Several plans have been broached for the entertainment of the admiral, as well as his officers, but dates have not been fixed. He will also be entertained by the French Consul, Doctor Marques.

Fete Day Today.

The cruise was so planned that the Montcalm would be in Honolulu to celebrate July 14—the French national fete day, the anniversary of the fall of the Bastille—and although no program has been arranged, at sunrise this morning the cruiser will be decked out with flags and bunting and put on her showiest dress. At eight o'clock a national salute will be fired, another at noon, and then, just at sunset, when the tricolor is hauled down, her guns will again boom the long salute, and the warships in port will join in the salute at noon. This will be one of the noisiest salutes the harbor has ever banged out, but it will only equal the oblation of spirits of officers and men.

One "Grande" Disaster.

The cruise across the Pacific was almost without incident, and it would have passed into the log as an uneventful voyage but for one disaster, which caused great distress of mind.

"It was a terrible disaster," said one of the officers. "The admiral's milk cow fell overboard."

And that was a disaster, for the ad-

MONEY ENOUGH FOR TEACHERS

School Board Has Funds on Hand to Pay Salaries of New Schedule.

There is money enough in the school fund to pay the salaries decided upon by the commissioners of education, and yesterday afternoon the board formally approved the schedule which, except for the salaries to be paid, has already been published in the Advertiser. The salaries to be paid the teachers were, at the request of the superintendent, not published, for the reason that many of them are so ridiculously small that the board is ashamed to have them published. The commissioners hope that the next legislature may be more liberal and make an appropriation large enough to enable the board to pay teachers decent salaries.

A few new teachers will probably be appointed later in the season, if it is found that there is money enough to pay their salaries.

The commissioners finished their labors yesterday afternoon and adjourned.

ROOSEVELT HAS TAKEN NO STAND FOR ANYONE

OYSTER BAY, July 14.—Colonel Roosevelt yesterday issued an emphatic statement to the effect that he had not as yet decided whether he would help the regular Republicans or the insurgent wing of the party in the elections. He brands all stories that he has offered help to either one side or the other as unqualified falsehoods.

England is disturbed over the question of adulterated foods.

miral's coffee and tea had to be sweetened with condensed milk after that tragedy. In all probability a Honolulu bossy will be signed on the ship's papers for the remainder of the cruise.

Like a Double Ship.

The Montcalm has a peculiar arrangement of smokestacks. Two are forward and two aft, leaving a long space amidships. She looks like two ships joined together. She has powerful engines, comprising three sets of vertical expansion, and three screws. She has a designed horsepower of 19,600, capable of driving her at a rate of twenty-one knots. Her normal coal supply is 1000 tons, and she will take on about that quantity while in port.

She is heavily armored, the armor belt being 7½ feet wide, 4½ of it being below waterline. She carries two 7.6-inch guns, one on the forward and one on the after deck eight 6.4-inch guns in the main battery; four 4-inch; sixteen 3-pounders; two submerged torpedo tubes. In her fighting top are four rapid fire guns. The Montcalm cost about $4,300,000. She is painted dark battle gray, and she appears to have unusually high sides and heavy superstructures.

Once aboard, a visitor is surprised at the splendid arrangement of rooms, quarters and compartments. The main deck—two decks—is particularly a surprise. This has the appearance of a double arcade, down the center of which are the deck supports, small offices, some dining rooms, petty officers' offices, shore guns, stands of arms, the smokestacks passing through from below to topside. On either side of these central fixtures is a broad passageway, the deck covered with a rubberoid coating, and alongside the ship's sides are quarters for the principal officers, offices, odds and ends of rooms, all roomy and comfortable, many fitted with potted plants. It all has a cozy appearance and looks much like a busy arcade of a city. The clean sweep of deck enables the crew to run down the two wide corridors without meeting with deck obstructions. The cabins are fitted with swinging lattice doors.

Admiral's Suite Aft.

In the after end of the vessel the whole section is devoted to the apartments of the admiral and members of his staff. The apartments are almost palatial. Before the entrances stand sentries armed with halberds, the one medieval feature amongst so much modern destructive engines. The admiral is further blessed. He has a deck all his own. The upper deck comes to a stop some distance from the stern. The upper deck is cut off and the main deck, extending from the admiral's apartments, runs out flush with the stern, giving him a sort of roof garden of his own, where he may at all times have privacy.

Commands Oriental Fleet.

The French fleet in the Pacific is officially known as the naval division of the extreme Orient. The commander-in-chief is Admiral de la Croix de Castries, who comes from one of the old and well known families of France. His staff comprises Chief of Staff Mac Guckin de Slane; Aide-de-Camp Carrel; Chief Engineer Le Lan; Division Paymaster Ollivier; Division Surgeon Kergeron. The vessel is commanded by Commandant Cheron, with Captain Boissel-Bombreval, second in command. Other officers are Lieutenants (senior grade) Raynaud, Laborde, Lorin, de Carne, Rouzard; Lieutenants Brown, de Colston, Girouin and Le Blond; Midshipmen Fabre, Tanzi, Goybet, Mignot; Engineers Badelon, Lambert, Bault, Saluce; Paymaster Beauvais; Surgeon Lancelotti.

Chief Boatswain B. H. Shepley, U. S. N., boarded the outcall in the stream and presented the compliments of the naval commandant and proffered assistance, and then looked after the securing of the lines on the wharf.

EXPECTED DENIAL CAME PROMPTLY

Liquor Dealers Deny Achi Deal, but Find Community Is From the "Show Me" State.

As was to have been expected, the report that the liquor dealers and Charley Achi had formed an alliance offensive and defensive, first to carry the plebiscite for booze and next to carry the Republican primaries, has brought forth a vigorous denial. The Advertiser appreciated the fact that denials of stories is a part of the antiprobibition campaign and prepared to meet one by not publishing all it knew concerning this nice little scheme to run things.

The Advertiser did not say, for instance, that it had first-hand information from the meeting held on Sunday in Achi's house, when Achi urged the runners of the liquor dealers to activity and impressed upon them the necessity for working for the Achi interests at the same time. The Advertiser did not tell how Charley Clark, in the office of the city clerk, before a number of witnesses, boasted of the alliance made between the liquor dealers, whose special agent he is, and the Achi faction, whose chief lieutenant he was during the last election, when he and Achi bolted the party and worked for the defeat of Norman Watkins and John Hughes. The Advertiser did not tell of the speech Clark made on Saturday afternoon at the fishmarket, when he announced that he and his followers were in the Republican party again to run in the interests of the liquor dealers, because the prohibitionists were trying to kill the party.

This was reserved, waiting for the denial to be published in the liquor dealers' organ yesterday, which came along, just as expected, but somewhat weak. The blow given the schemers has been, apparently, in a spot that took all the wind away for the time being. The fact that Isaac Cockett, saloonkeeper and member of the liquor dealers' executive campaign committee, is being touted now as a party candidate for the house from the fifth, looks as though the members of that committee were only working at present to carry the plebiscite, as they virtuously declare.

Formal Denial.
The Advertiser has received a formal denial of the Booze-Achi combine, as follows:

Editor Advertiser:—Referring to the article that appears on page one of your issue of even date, in which you claim that "the executive committee of the liquor dealers have combined with Mr. Achi," we would on behalf of said executive committee say: That neither the committee individually or as a whole, nor any of the members thereof individually or as a body, have made any combination with Mr. Achi. As you doubtless know, we are devoting our whole attention to the coming plebiscite, and at the present time are not paying any attention to politics. We would ask you to give this denial the same prominence as your report on the supposed combine. Yours faithfully,
CHAS. G. BARTLETT,
GEO. J. O'NEIL.

It will be noticed that Isaac Cockett, a member of the committee, is not one of the signers. Jack Scully's name likewise is lacking, as is also that of Charley McCarthy. McCarthy, of course, would never be suspected of trying to get the liquor dealers' strength for the Democrats.

Taking it all in all, the liquor dealers have to show the community that the appearances against them are only a series of unfortunate circumstances. Otherwise they will find the straight Republicans to be from Missouri. The Clark-Wise-Achi-Cockett combination is rather damning evidence, and it will take more than written denials to make it appear other than an ugly attempt to wreck the Republican organization.

PECULIAR CALIFORNIA CASE BECOMES LOCAL

Honolulu Police Asked to Look for Link in Mysterious Dynamiting.

The local police have been asked to hunt for and arrest Lu Etta Smith, who is wanted for perjury and accepting bribes in Santa Rosa, California. She was in this city several months ago, but there is little chance of her being here now, although the police are keeping an eye open for her.

The case with which she is connected is peculiarly interesting. She was a nurse in the Burke's Sanitarium, Santa Rosa, conducted by Dr. W. P. Burke. She is an unmarried woman, but when she left Santa Francisco had with her a little girl, who is supposed to be the daughter of herself and Doctor Burke. About four months ago Doctor Burke was arrested on a charge of attempting to dynamite her, an attempt that nearly succeeded. She is an important witness in the case, and it is said that her testimony will convict him, and she is now charged with accepting hush money and leaving the State.

She took passage on the Pacific Mail steamer China, leaving San Francisco April 19, and was last heard of in Yokohama. Sheriff Jarrett has been notified to expect a cable regarding her at any moment.

AVOID ALL DANGERS.

Dysentery is a dangerous disease, but can be cured. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy has been successfully used in nine epidemics of dysentery. It has never been known to fail. It is equally valuable for children and adults, and when reduced with water and sweetened it is pleasant to take. For sale by all dealers. Benson, Smith & Co., Ltd., agents for Hawaii.

LIQUOR AGAIN IS BEHIND REVOLVER

Would-Be Murderer Shoots Down Wife After Taking a Few Drinks as Bracers.

WOMAN MAY YET RECOVER

Shooter Gives Himself Up to the Police After Posses Starts Out.

(From Thursday's Advertiser.)

Angered by divorce proceedings just instituted against him, and with courage bolstered up by drink, Waiwaiole, a Hawaiian, yesterday shot and seriously wounded his wife in an attempt to murder her. The woman, Kamaka Waiwaiole, is now at the Queen's Hospital, suffering from two severe but not necessarily fatal wounds.

The shooting occurred outside their home, near Kamehameha IV. road, and was witnessed by J. J. Burns, collector for the Metropolitan Meat Market. The woman was preparing the evening meal, when her husband walked up to her, seized her by the throat, and said in Hawaiian:

"Now your life is in my hands."

Then he drew out his gun and fired at her, the bullet plowing through the side of her head, hardly deeper than the skin. She fell to the ground and he fired again, the bullet taking effect in her shoulder.

It was only a little before seven in the evening and still light, but notwithstanding this and the fact that there were many people near the premises, the man walked away unmolested.

Not only did those who saw the shooting and heard the shots make no attempt to stop him, but he even told a police officer of the deed, and was permitted to go with only a laugh from the officer, who was off duty and did not feel called upon to act.

As soon as his wife had fallen to the ground and he had taken the final shot at her prostrate body, he walked into the home of the late Frank Harvey, on the neighboring premises. In the room were Mrs. Mike Harvey, Mrs. Austin, Miss Harvey and Ed Hanapi, the police officer, then in civilian clothes.

He walked up to the first two and kissed them, saying, "I have killed my wife. I have come to say goodbye. I am going away now to kill myself." The women smelled the reek of liquor on his breath.

Hanapi laughed and the man walked outside and disappeared.

Meanwhile the stricken woman had crawled fifty yards to the home of David Kaholekawai, climbing over an intervening wall and finally falling exhausted on the veranda.

Here the officers found her and when they reached her side with the stretcher she even tried to raise herself into it. Two trustees took charge of her and while the patrol whipped its way through the city streets to the Queen's Hospital, Officers Parish and Abreu started up the stream searching for the would-be murderer.

On the way they stopped at the house of several men further up the stream and asked them if they had seen Waiwaiole. They answered that they had; he had been seen heading up the stream.

Two hours later these men themselves delivered him up to the police officers, he having lain hid in their house while the officers were making the inquiries. Parish and Abreu reached the police station after the man had already been taken into custody.

Deputy Rose took the man to the scene of the shooting and started an examination at once, the prisoner showing them where he had thrown his gun and cartridges. Waiwaiole's guilt is proven beyond a doubt, but he will probably be held until the woman either recovers or dies, before he is charged.

According to the testimony of the witnesses, he had been drinking but was not drunk when he committed the shooting.

SHERMAN'S ENGINES OUT OF KILTER

Late yesterday afternoon one of the engines of the transport Sherman went out of commission, necessitating a lot of rush repair work. The transport was scheduled to leave for Guam and Manila at six o'clock, and the time was advanced an hour, and at six o'clock it was reported that repairs could not be made in less than twelve hours. The damage was more serious than the officers at first thought, and extra time was called for and allowed.

AUTOMATIC PHONES ARE NOW BEING INSTALLED

The new wall and desk phones of the automatic telephone service are being installed in the downtown district and the territory will be covered as rapidly as possible. The residence districts will be invaded presently by a corps of installing workmen, and the old manual phones taken out. The cable system through the city is now in readiness. The automatic service will probably be ready for use in about two weeks.

MECHANIC HITS THE DRINK EIL

Arraigns Greatest Criminal of Society Before Facts of Its Own Influence.

John McTaggart, a mechanic of the O. R. & L. Co., is responsible for one of the severest arraignments of liquor yet to be made from the local pulpit, delivering a sermon on the evil of drink as complete as it was strong, at the Methodist church several weeks ago.

Mr. McTaggart summed up the question from the standpoint of his own trade, and speaking from his own experience, drew no influence from the "missionaries" or any other class of people, who, in their endeavors to set forth the truth of social matters for the benefit of society, have used the same facts which he used. He said, in part: "Is it right to take from the moderate drinker his freedom to get a drink when he wishes so to do? And I say, Yes, it is right. In the first place we are taking nothing from him that is of any benefit to him in any sense. Then again we are taking from him that which is the cause of his chief danger. The moderate drinker is on the same trail which leads down to the place of the drunkard. Let me ask from what class the drunkards graduate? Why, from the moderate drinking class and there are no drunkards in this or any country but one day in the past were in the moderate drinking class. And if you will show me a man who takes a drink now and then, I will show you a man who takes a little more drink now than he did then."

A few evenings ago the Bulletin had a cartoon showing a city with all the blind pigs well barred in and the gate fastened with a bar marked "present law." And there was Mr. Woolley with the prohibition bar trying to break down the door and turn the blind pigs loose. Why, I could take the editor of the Bulletin by the hand and lead him to a place upon the very block on which we are met together in this church tonight and show him a well kept blind pig and in fact he is not so very blind, either. I said to a man some time ago, a man whose business it is to find and close such places and bring the offender to justice, "How is it that that place is allowed to run there? Don't you know it is there?" "Oh, yes, we know it is there." "Then why isn't it closed?" "Because that man has influence amongst his people and controls votes at the election and we are given to understand that we are to keep our eyes closed and our hands off."

"The devices resorted to by friends of the saloon were resorted to by friends of slavery, but Illinois raised up a son who brought out the truth and proved to the world that our country could get along better without the national curse of servitude. Abraham Lincoln has been quoted as having been opposed to prohibition. Here is a matter of history which shows us where Mr. Lincoln stood in his mature years: On the morning of the 14th day of April, 1865, just the day before his assassination, he said, 'After reconstruction, the next great problem is the overthrow of the liquor traffic.' And, although Mr. Lincoln didn't live to see the day, I think we are justified—in view of the victorious trend of prohibition these latter years—in the belief that the time is not far distant when the world shall know, by a nation-wide prohibition, that America can get along better, infinitely better, without the national curse of intemperance."

BEDRIDDEN WITH ECZEMA SIX WEEKS

Itching, Burning Eruption from Head to Foot—Doctor Gave Her Up Entirely—First Application of Cuticura Brought Relief and Sleep.

CUTICURA REMEDIES EFFECT PERFECT CURE

"Four years ago I suffered severely with a terrible eczema, being a mass of sores from head to foot and for six weeks confined to my bed. During that time I suffered continual torture from itching and burning. After being given up by my doctor I was advised to try the Cuticura Remedies. After the first bath with Cuticura Soap and application of Cuticura Ointment I enjoyed the first good sleep during my entire illness. I also used Cuticura Resolvent and the treatment was continued for about three weeks. At the end of that time I was able to be about the house, entirely cured, and have felt no ill effects since. I would advise any person suffering from any form of skin trouble to try the Cuticura Remedies as I know what they did for me. Mrs. Edward Neuman, 1112 Salina St., Watertown, N. Y., April 11, 1909."

MURDERER IS WANTED IN ITALY

Extradition of Porter Charlton Will Be Asked for in Special Message.

IT MAY NOT BE GRANTED

American Officials See a Chance to Punish Italy for Giving Criminals Refuge.

ROME, July 14.—A formal request for the extradition of Porter Charlton, who murdered his wife, Mary Scott Castle Charlton, at Moltrasio, Italy, on June 9, has been forwarded to Washington by a special messenger of the Italian government.

Porter Charlton, in a fit of jealous rage, killed his wife, the daughter of H. H. Scott, of San Francisco, well known in Honolulu, striking her on the head with a hammer until she was insensible and then packing her body in a trunk, which he threw into Lake Como. It has been shown that the woman was not dead when put into the trunk.

Charlton escaped and it was thought that he, too, had been murdered. The Italian police arresting a mutual friend of Charlton and his wife, a C. K. Ispoloff, suspecting him of a double crime. Charlton made his way to New York and was arrested on landing, making a full confession.

May Not Surrender Him.

WASHINGTON, July 1.—Officials of the State department frankly say they do not care to comment upon the possibility of Porter Charlton's extradition or to give any information in regard to the matter.

"The case will come up between the Italian and United States governments," and can not be discussed in advance," is the exact and only language of the department reply to all inquiries.

It is known here that the Marchese Paolo di Montagliari, chargé d'affaires of the Italian embassy, before departing for the summer headquarters of his government, at Manchester, New Hampshire, last Saturday, presented a request to the state department that Charlton should be arrested and turned over to the Italian authorities in case he arrived in America.

There is an extradition treaty between the United States and Italy, proclaimed in 1868, in which provision is made for the extradition by both countries of persons charged with crime. If this treaty is strictly adhered to, it would seem that the United States would have no recourse other than to surrender Mr. Charlton.

Speculation, however, is rife, in view of the fact that Italy does not always surrender Italians who have committed crimes in this country and have escaped to Italian territory. The Italian government distinguishes between its "subjects" and other "persons." Observers see in this a reason why the United States may refuse to surrender Charlton—on the ground that Italy does not always surrender those who are charged with crime.

A Friend of Taft.

It is quite likely that the international aspect of the matter will be referred to President Taft, who was a classmate at Yale of Judge Paul Charlton, father of Porter Charlton, and if this government insists upon holding Charlton it is also quite likely in that case that the Italian government will bring to bear the concluding words of Mr. Gresham's letter, in which he said: "No good reason is perceived why citizens of the United States who commit crimes in Italy should not, if they take refuge in their own country, be delivered up."

Unfortunate Father.

Judge Charlton left here this afternoon for New York. He is the law officer of the insular bureau of the war department and well acquainted with any loopholes that might avail to extricate his son from his difficulty.

Much sympathy is expressed with Judge Charlton in Washington, where he is highly esteemed, especially as it is recalled that his youngest son, Denis Charlton, aged sixteen, who is now visiting in Pennsylvania, accidentally shot and killed a playmate, Vivian Bowdoin, aged fourteen, son of S. J. Bowdoin of the Southern Railway, while playing "Wild West" at the Western High School here on February 4, 1909.

ANOTHER AMERICAN WOMAN MURDERED

LONDON, July 14.—A body, believed to be that of Belle Elmore, an American actress, who has been missing since February last, was found yesterday, buried in the cellar of a deserted house.

The husband of the missing actress is also missing and a search for him will be begun at once.
